

Gary's Consumption

Written by: Jackie Emmons

I see your sadness & feel your pain
once you try to sleep again.

It is the hardest you work all day,
to lay down & concentrate, on sleep.

I feel you tremor & squirm,
twitches that have me concerned.

Why was this?

I have to assume that god & the world want to consume you.

With a chemical affect that tears you apart
it is hard for you in your lonely heart.

Feeling empty & searching for new ways to make it through your day.

All I want is to consume the lives that consumed yours
and I hope to god you can find more doors,
of understanding you see,

I can't give you that because it doesn't consume me.

I don't know how you feel the irritation & the frustration
all supposed to fixed by a pill.
